

Take a Stroll in WonderLab's Punggol-inspired Sensory Garden!

See Punggol Through Time: A tree trunk with peepholes serves as a portal to Punggol's past and present—from a humble fishing village to a thriving smart, sustainable and vibrant precinct.

Fun Fact: The tree installation is modelled after Barringtonia racemosa, a tree native to Punggol, symbolising the town's deep relationship with its environment.

Hear the Sounds of Punggol: Step into an immersive sound installation, featuring beautifully crafted birdcages overflowing with flowers, representing nature's presence in an urban space. Three native bird species—Asian Koel, White-breasted Waterhen, and Eurasian Tree Sparrow—are depicted outside the cages, inviting visitors to listen to their unique calls at the press of a button.

Fun Fact: The installation juxtaposes Punggol's natural environment (bird calls, water sounds) with present-day urban sounds (MRT hums, community voices) to showcase how nature and development coexist.

Smell Punggol's Botanical Heritage: Once home to smallholder farms and kampongs, Punggol has long been filled with fragrant plants used for cooking and healing—many of which still thrive in its parks and gardens today. This installation showcases pandan, lemongrass, torch ginger, and curry leaf, aromatic plants that have shaped both Punggol's past and present.

Fun Fact: These are the featured Plants & Their Uses:

- Pandan – A traditional flavoring in rice dishes and desserts.
- Lemongrass – Used in teas and medicinal remedies.
- Torch Ginger – A key ingredient in rojak and laksa.
- Curry Leaf – Found in homegrown spice gardens of past and present.

Taste the Flavours of Punggol: Take a seat at Singapore's iconic HDB Blue table, where food brings people together. From traditional kopitiam favourites to modern bites, Punggol's food scene is evolving, blending heritage with new flavours. Good food is meant to be shared!
